“ Throughout the years one tends to take for granted so many things. Then comes the time that we all dread, watching a loved one have his final days. At that time, when the loved ones gather to help him and each other through that very hard and sad time, you start to realize that yes, it is sad, but you start reminiscing and speaking of all the wonderful times throughout the life and how much was taught and learned, which then brings you to the full circle of life. When God decides it's time to embrace our loved one in to his Kingdom, you realize that you will always have him in heart and memory and will meet up again at the beginning of life's ever after.
